Miyoko: Mythic Paint

Mythic's cans have an old-timey appeal that is hard to turn away from. It's non-toxic, zero VOC cred only sweetens the deal.

Did you know that a "no-VOC" paint can still have VOCs in it? Yup. According to EPA regulations, a manufacture can call a paint no-VOC if it has less than 5 grams per liter of VOCs (a low-VOC paint is defined as less than 50 grams per liter of VOCs). I've heard a lot about Mythic paints recently, which contain zero VOCs, and had the chance to visit a house that was painted with the brand's products as well as visit a great shop that sells them. Not only are the paints completely non-toxic but the company has design going for it too. Keep your eye out for upcoming stories featuring Mythic.
